

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛 获奖作品

国际高中传媒荣誉协会

写作类 Writing Categories

- 社论写作 Editorial Writing
- 新闻写作News Writing
- 专题写作 Feature Writing
- 意见专栏 Opinion Column
- 评论专栏 Review Column
- 体育新闻写作 Sports Writing

- 个人传记写作 Profile Writing
- 健康、科学与农业写作 Health,
 Science and Agricultural Writing
- 博客写作 Blogging

Category 1: 社论写作 Editorial Writing

金奖: Julia Robertson McCallum High School, Austin, Texas

Letting students know their voices matter

Administration made the right choice to support freedom of speech, personal expression

On Sept. 29, the usual House Park Statesman, and even went on to 7:30, asking for everyone-from the stands our administration was not exactly to the field-to remove their caps and face welcoming the attention, one thing that south for the usual playing of "The Star cannot be denied is how well they handled Spangled Banner" before the beginning the affair. one of the biggest football games of the year against LBJ. Most everyone did, as President Donald Trump after he referred to the professional football players that participated in the kneeling as "sons of football game announcer came over the featured in an online story in a London loudspeaker a couple of minutes before newspaper, The Independent. Even though

The support of adults, teachers and faculty especially, is what students need most everyone usually does, except for in times like this, when being politically seven McCallum cheerleaders. Instead active can be so frowned upon. The fact of facing south towards the flags, they that our principal, Mike Garrison, and our dropped to one knee, instantly joining the cheerleading sponsor, Chastity Colbert, #TakeAKnee movement, which has, over chose to allow the cheer squad to take a recent weeks, turned into a national issue. knee, citing that there were no district rules The movement was originally started by against it, is a vote of encouragement for Colin Kaepernick, and was intensified by students to stand up for what we believe in during this time of political strife.

Younger generations are often accused by those older than us of being too indifferent, of turning our backs on politics The same week of the LBJ rivalry game, and current events. They complain that several other Texas high schools had we are more concerned with our phones

"Letting students know their voices matter"

获奖评价:

This timely and important topic involves seven cheerleaders who took a knee during the National Anthem before a football game. It is an editorial that applauds the school principal for not interfering with this symbolic act and for allowing young people to have their values on display while taking a stand for justice and equality. The piece is well researched with both physical and human sources. It reaches a conclusion (without preaching) calling for action and providing a commendation.

银奖: Mehr Bawa Irvine High School, Irvine, California

Staff Editorial

Culture of cheating undermines student integrity

Sixty percent of 36,000 high school students nationwide said they cheated on a test, according to a 2006 Josephson Institute of Ethics study.

Josephson Institute of Ethics study. Then in 2015, a study of 70,000 students by former Rutgers University Professor Donald McCabe revealed that 64 percent of those students admitted to cheating on a test. Both studies reveal a disturbing trend—one that also continues to plague schools in 2017.

Even at Ivrine High, there's been an increase this year, assistant principal Leffrey Hernader's said. Students feel the pressure to succeed, Hernandez continued. Pressures from parents, peers and colleges cultivate an environment focused solely on grades—a perfect climate for cheating. The flawed ideal that "the end justifies the means" has become a guiding principle for some. However, until society and students satt taking responsibility for their actions their teachers have discussed academic integrity with the class. At least this 32 percent should know what they are doing is wrong, right? Why then, would they continue to cheat? A 2011 University of Missouri study revealed that some cheaters justify their actions by rationalizing that cheating doesn't cause any real harm. This form of self-reinforcement corrupts astudent's morality and further temps the cheater to cheat again. They end up redefining cheating, convincing themselves it's okat've do so.

To combat cheating, 73 percent of Irvine High teachers have taken additional measures, according to a recent El Vaquero teacher survey. Teachers have made changes in tests and quizzes—either by creating different forms or rewriting them. Somenowuse cell phone pockets. However, there's only so much teachers can do.

While pressures to achieve tempt

"Culture of cheating undermines student integrity"

获奖评价:

The age-old and universal problem of academic cheating is brought to the local level by a fine all-school anonymous survey of exactly how much cheating takes place. It compares results with similar surveys taken nationally. It is well written, and in the conclusion, the writer provides powerful thoughts about all those who are hurt in the process besides the cheater.

铜奖:

Eva Strelitz-Block

Liberal Arts and Sciences Academy, Austin, Texas

What we talk about when we talk about taking a knee

has been simmering ever since NFL 49ers player Colin Kaepernick began taking a knee last year. He declined to stand for the playing of the national anthem as a protest message, the struggle - the conversation - is evolving. As of our national failure to effectively address police brutality and racial injustice. Debate on the meaning of taking a knee has exploded following President Trump's exhortation to NFL team owners to crack down on their "activist" players. In his deliberate effort to #TakingAKnee as an unpatriotic act that is fundamentally disrespectful to men and women in uniform, we at The Liberator see a calculated effort to undermine resistance to his "Make America Great Again" agenda.

Nevertheless, as Friday night lights have begun to shine once again this fall, more and more high schoolers, in solidarity with their professional sporting counterparts, are announcing their unwillingness to cede

However, standing with linked arms rather than kneeling Controversy surrounding athletes taking a knee is not a capitulation. It does not represent students yielding to decorum or cowing in response to threats from administrators - or presidents. It is an indication that the > coach Brown noted, "[last year] we knelt because we were in pain. We were hurt. But it comes a time when men and women need to stand and fight through the pain and hurt." This year, his team is standing, arms linked, forming a chain of solidarity. This year, kneeling and standing athletes and students are speaking directly to Trump and rejecting his vision for our country.

Predictably, even student athlete activism has gained momentum, so has the backlash against student protest. These reprisals are wholly unsubtle in their attempts to silence student voices. Two Texas private high school football players have been kicked off their team for taking a knee. A Louisiana school district superintendent has

"What we talk about when we talk about taking a knee"

获奖评价:

This addresses current controversies coming from the White House, on football fields and in other avenues that involve players and cheerleaders taking a knee during the playing of the National Anthem. This poignant editorial commends youth for standing up for their Constitutional rights. Its argument is logical and well-presented.

Category 2: 新闻写作 News Writing

金奖: Fatima Kammona

Iowa City West High School, Iowa City, Iowa

"94"

获奖评价:

When boys rated the physical appearances of 94 girls at the school, a counter group of students and faculty met and acted to empower females through positive messages. They made it clear what the boys did (issuing letter grades for girls' looks) was unacceptable. Fatima reported these activities clearly and thoroughly. She talked with at least one girl on the list. Fatima reported and wrote well how students and faculty came together.

94

Following a list that sparked school-wide discontent for its ratings on the appearances of 94 female students on Oct. 18, many gathered to make posters spreading positive messages and empowering women.

Fatima Kammona, Reporter • November 2, 2017 • 1 Comment

银奖: Noah Slaughter

Francis Howell North High School, St. Charles, Missouri

"From Reactive to Proactive"

获奖评价:

A community awareness night about heroin and abuse of addictive prescription painkillers brought out a large crowd that heard moving words and deeds from first responders and other officials. Noah reported and wrote about the gathering and efforts to correct these problems in an easy-to-read way that provoked readers to think about the issues.

FROM REACTIVE TO PROACTIVE

As the number of heroin overdoses in St. Charles continues to grow, many in the community are trying to reverse the trend

by Noah Slaughter

reader524@gmail.com | @noahslaughterr

ne by one, almost every person raises a hand. There are mothers.

There are fathers.

Others are friends and neighbors. Most live nearby, Some don't.

They've never met one another, but one thing has brought all of them to the auditorium at Ft. Zumwalt East on a windy night in January: they all know someone who has died from prescription painkillers or heroin.

Ft. Zumwalt East hosted a community awareness night about heroin and prescription painkillers on Jan. 25, hoping to inform locals about these drugs and slow down their spread. From a detective to an attorney to St. Charles paramedics, attendees had the opportunity to hear from experts about the effect of these drugs. The event, which only expected a crowd of 50-100, nearly filled the auditorium.

"It really reaches all aspects of a family," Jeremy Moore, assistant superintendent of student personnel for Fort Zumwalt, said at the community awareness night. "I think we're hard-pressed to not think of one family member or one friend or one co-worker that hasn't experienced something negative from the impact of what's going on with prescription painkillers and heroin in this community and beyond."

Overdose deaths from heroin and prescription painkillers in St. Charles more than doubled between 2008 and 2015, rising from 22 to 53 and making the county a microcosm of the broader trend in the U.S. As these drugs take more and more St. Charles residents every year, some feel that the problem is not being properly addressed.

"Just imagine what kind of conversation we would be having if our motor vehicle accident rates tripled, or what kind of reaction we would see if our homicide rates tripled," Cassie Morris from the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse said at the January meeting, "Unfortunately, this just isn't getting the attention that it needs, which is why we're seeing and continuing to see these numbers increase."

In response to what they view as a lack of knowledge in the community, the St. Charles ambulance district started an awareness campaign. Last spring, paramedics wore "Stop Heroin" t-shirts as part of their uniform for two months,

铜奖: Kaleigh Koc

Shawnee Mission East High School, Prairie Village, Kansas

"Threat to the Net"

获奖评价:

Kaleigh provided a comprehensive report on effects of the Federal Communications Commission of repeal of Neutrality Act regulations. Kaleigh examined the massive implications of this FCC move on students, faculty, administration and the community. This is a great example of how to localize a national story.

金奖:

Sarah Zimmerman

Francis Howell North High School, St. Charles, Missouri

"One Incredible Goal"

获奖评价:

Outstanding example combining reporting and organization that is enlightening and inspirational. Captures the amazing sense of drive, diversity and determination in a unique school. The writer captures more than exteriors. She sees fears and ambitions: guarantees of lunch food for all, pride of recognizing flags, joy of receiving paper and writing utensils. This presentation provides a model that can direct educators who care about teaching immigrants and a plan that citizens can adopt in their communities. The writer enables readers to fathom the common language of humanity. Meet a world of aspirations.

Emily Fey

Shawnee Mission East High School, Prairie Village, Kansas

"Two Hearts Beat as One"

获奖评价:

Wired. One word describes the genius of this story about two teenage girls who share the WPW syndrome. The writer selects key discoveries, especially the classroom-to-nurse incident when one girl's heart monitor sounded. Learning they both had the Wolff-Parkinson-White syndrome proved they were literally wired. But there are boundless other ways: chocolate, dance dresses, travel destinations, hidden coffee shops. As the writer shows the electricity of experiences unlimited, she wires readers to the magical duo.

铜奖:

Anastasia Sotiropoulos

Episcopal School of Dallas, Dallas, Texas

"Spain to America: Teen Uncovers New Experiences"

获奖评价:

The diligent journalist follows a journey that takes readers from Barcelona to Amsterdam to Iceland (almost) and on to Dallas. The details are precise, and the desires are moving. As a result, the writer expands the journey to ideas as the host and the student perceive what kind of changes each has experienced. A dream turns into reality with the help of a thoughtful writer.

Spain to America: Teen Uncovers New Experiences, Culture

"I froze my heart for that moment."

As her 15-year-old daughter boarded the train to Madrid, Ana Belèn Barrena realized the moment she had been imagining for months was in front of her. Excitement and fear of the unknown for her only child came over her.

Category 4: 意见专栏 Opinion column

金奖:

Julianne ford

Lakota east high school, liberty township, ohio

"The Minority's Majority"

获奖评价:

Julianne takes on a sensitive topic in addressing this contemporary issue, involving both religion and politics. Her opinion writing excels as a total package. She adeptly navigates the key issues, which are somewhat complex, by weaving in personal experience, research data, direct evidence and anecdotes to craft an effective opinion column. Her seamless writing and distinct voice invite the reader to sit in on and engage in this conversation about the issues and ways to address them.

银奖:

Jacques abou-rizk

Newton north high school, newton, massachusetts

"Take initiative against gender stereotypes in STEM"

获奖评价:

Jacques draws attention to an important academic issue - feminism and women in STEM. Using observations and evidence, he argues critical points and offers actions for improvements. This opinion column presents a well-developed argument, voice, and tone.

铜奖:

Ivana matias perez Selma high school, selma, california

"Life Lessons of a Field Worker"

获奖评价:

Opinion columns provide a platform for fresh perspectives informed by personal experiences. This opinion column does just that. Ivana gives readers a rare glimpse of her life as a field worker. Her solid writing presents key insights, particularly timely as debates swirl around immigration issues.

Category 5: 评论专栏 Review Column

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Caroline Fellows Webster Groves High School, Saint Louis, Missouri

"Dog movie will bring viewers to tears-multiple times"

获奖评价:

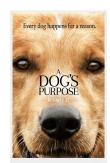

Although guestions seldom make great leads for any type of journalistic article, Caroline starts with three that most teenagers as well as adults have asked themselves over and over. "What is the meaning of life? Are we here for a reason? Is there a point to any of this?" Caroline then points out that the movie "A Dog's Purpose," answers these questions when it follows the dog Bailey across several lives. As all good reviews do, this one uses comparison and contrast. I read a lot of movie reviews in this year's entry, and Caroline was one of just a few writers who gave the rating of the production as well as its length. Those are two essentials for a good movie review.

Review: Dog movie will bring viewers to tearsmultiple times

BY WGECHO on MARCH 4, 2017 · O (0)

Caroline Fellows Online Editor

"What is the meaning of life? Are we here for a reason? Is there a point to any of this?"

"A Dog's Purpose," released Jan. 27, tells the story of a canine's quest to learn the meaning of life. Made on an estimated budget While these may seem to be words from famous philosophers like Plato and Socrates, they're actually from the dog Bailey (Josh Gad) in Universal Pictures's "A Dog's Purpose"—a movie which will send any viewer with a loving heart on an emotional roller-coaster.

"A Dog's Purpose" is essentially one story that follows a dog across several lives.

Bailey is first taken in by a young boy named Ethan (played as a child by Bryce Gheisar, as a teen by KJ Apa and as a grown man by Dennis Quaid) and spends years playing, retrieving and even gets teenage Ethan a girlfriend, Hannah (played as a teen by Britt Robertson and as a grown women by Peggy Lipton). While he experiences the highs and lows of his life, Bailey ponders-why is he here? Is his purpose in life simply to play and dig up dead cats? Is he just supposed to be with Ethan and Hannah his entire life, or is there a deeper meaning?

Bailey ponders this questions throughout all his lives, and for each he has a different name, breed and owner.

银奖: Angelica Sano Troy High School, Fullerton, California

"iPhoneX"

获奖评价:

The suspended-interest lead was a grabber. She used a lot of comparison and contrast as she told readers how iPhoneX differed from previous versions. She succinctly stated her views, and even though she didn't like it, she still pointed out new features she thought were an improvement. Most importantly, she gave the price of the new phone, and that is a must for readers when they're contemplating a purchase. Her conclusion, like her opening, was also a grabber. She told readers "the next time you walk into the Apple store, don't let such a phony product X-ploit you!" — a clever play on words.

iPhone X

by Angelica Sano

This changes everything. Too much. Apple has always had a penchant for pulling out all the stops for new products, and the recently announced iPhone X is no exception. Learn about its features and whether there really is treasure under the X.

Apple's slogan may be "Think different," but the new iPhone X seems a far cry from such a mission statement

Nov. 3 marks the release of the iPhone X, and it's not exactly up to par with some of Apple's best products (or even its most mediocre ones). Apple claims to provide handy, easy-to-use technology for its wide range of consumers, yet the iPhone X does the complete opposite. With its high price tag and unnecessary features, it may be better to not buy yet another iPhone.

Ever since the first iPhone came out 10 years ago, Apple has developed a bad habit of ignoring the requests of its loyal customers. This is especially true for the iPhone X, which pushes aside consumers' wishes and replaces them with pointless design changes, such as the lack of a border and a home button. In fact, it has an even faster battery drainage than the iPhone 8, and some have said that it starts to function poorly with 30 percent of its battery still left. Remember how our beloved headphone jack died with the iPhone 7? Well, there's still no news of it coming back. Instead, we are left with the "revolutionary" animoji, by which people can control emojis with their faces.

铜奖: Riley Mullgardt Webster Groves High School, Saint Louis, Missouri

"Singer/Songwriter's 3rd album pulls at heartstrings"

获奖评价:

Two key elements of an album review are to show comparisons to the artist's previous works and to include some lyrics from the current release. Riley did both those in his review. In addition, he also informed the reader of four places where he/she could purchase the album, and gave prices which varied at all four locations. Riley quoted Sheeran as saying "I need to write the best love song of my career." According to Riley, he did. The lyrics prove Riley right as Sheeran sings "You know, the future's in the hands of you and me. So let's all get together, we can all be free, Spread love and understanding, positivity."

Singer/songwriter's 3rd album pulls heart strings

BY WGECHO on APRIL 28, 2017 · (0)

Riley Mullgardt Entertainment Editor

Public domain image from Wikimedia Commons. "Divide," released March 3, is singer/songwriter Ed Sheeran's third album.

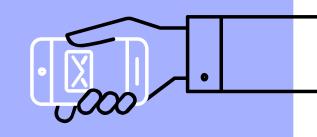

When the Instagram page "teddysphotos" posted on Jan. 1, the world knew Ed Sheeran was back.

After taking a break from music and social media the previous year, Sheeran released two singles, "Castle on the Hill" and "Shape of You" in the course of one day. Over the next three months, Sheeran posted hints and snippets of his new album, "Divide."

This pop album dropped March 3, and according to Billboard is "aiming for No. 1 on Billboard 200 Chart with year's biggest debut."

Official Charts wrote that in 24 hours, "Divide" sold "232,000 physical and digital copies."

Category 6:

体育新闻写作 SPORTS WRITING

金奖

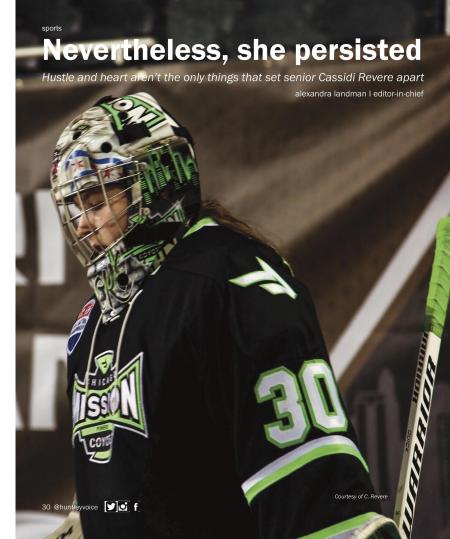

Alexandra Landman, Huntley High School, Huntley, Illinois

"Nevertheless, she persisted"

获奖评价:

There is no hesitancy by the author to draw us in to the struggle by a young woman to achieve a measure of success in hockey. The photo leading off the piece is special, and the quotes used throughout weave a solid piece about growth, failure, success and peace of mind.

All sports writers should keep reading more biographical pieces, but also don't lose the enthusiasm to get to know your subject. I enjoyed the closing of this feature.

银奖

Clara Kobashigawa (with Gareth Kwok), Acalanes High School, Lafayette, California

"Scrimmage controversy costs senior her last water polo season"

获奖评价:

A strong enterprise piece that balances sides of arguments over the fate of an athlete's senior season. The copy could easily be trimmed to focus on the key points of the dispute. It seemed like the path to explain the disputes took too long to develop. It was special to see that the story got responses from both sides, despite when one side didn't comment. Keep up the work to build similar reporting pieces that expose the thin or gray areas that exist in athletic eligibility.

Blueprint Sports

Issue 3 December 15, 2017 Volume 78

Scrimmage Controversy Costs Senior Her Last Water Polo Season

Lauren Etnyre's season blocked after eligibility transfer dispute invoked by former school Campolindo

Clara Kobashigawa and Gareth Kwok Print and Managing Editors-in-Chief

Acalanes senior Lauren Etryre, a promising water polo star already signed to Indiana University, never imagined her final year of high school water polo would end in heartbreak. In reality, Etryre's season never began. After a drawn-out debate over eligibility rules, the North Coast Section (NCS) banned Etryre from playing for the entire season, before she even had a chance to play wearing the Dons' signature blue and white.

The disqualification stemmed from Etryre's transfer from Campolindo High School to Acalanes early this season. Etryre dedicated three years of her life to the Campolindo water polo program, playing on the varsity team for two of those years, before transferring to Acalanes on Aug. 30.

During the Cougars' preseason retreat to Santa Cruz the week before school started, Etnyre participated in a two-team practice activity that under NCS rules had to be deemed as a scrimmage against the Soquel High School water polo team on Aug. 17. She then played in another scrimmage at Acalanes during the weekend of Aug. 26-27 after school had started. Little did she know that these scrimmages would essentially be the last thing she would participate in for the 2017 season. Under California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) Rule 600 adopted in 2008, the NCS Commissioner interprets a rule that "a student becomes a member of the regular school team when they participate in a scrimmage or contest." Due to CIF-NCS Constitution Section 207.B.5.b.vii, no student shall be eligible to participate in the same sport at two different schools in the same school year, and the NCS banned Etnyre from playing at Acalanes.

During the month of August, Etnyre's mother, Allison, began to take care of Etnyre's grandmother, who was just diagnosed with cancer, down in Texas. With Allison in Texas for two months. Etnyre decided to support the family back at home.

"I was devastated to learn my grandma

Senior Lauren Etnyre looks for a teammate to pass to during practice at Acalanes. Despite being ineligible for the rest of the season after transferring to Acalanes, she will be playing collegiate water polo at Indiana University.

> Lemmon stated he could have possibly waived the second scrimmage at Acalanes because it was at a time when Etnyre's transfer was in the

Courtesy Photo/Deanna Wentze

铜奖:

Akshara Majjiga, Monta Vista High School, Cupertino, California

"Climbing Kiliminjaro"

获奖评价:

Anyone who has read the travels of a mountaineer understands the agonizing, harrowing moments that are part of the challenge of climbing. Thanks to this author, there are many moments when we area transported to his side. In the space available, a most commendable piece that incorporates imagery and much information.

CLIMBING KILIMANJARO

Raja family explores Tanzanian culture through trek up Mount Kilimanjaro

BY AKSHARA MAJJIGA

Dolepole"

This was a phrase that freshman Daanyal Raja and his family heard repeatedly from their Tanzanian guides as they made their long-awaited climb up one of the world's highest peaks. In Swahili, it means "slowly, slowly." And, as they made their way through hail and rain, this phrase encouraged them to take the seemingly impossible trek one step at a time.

Their journey up Kilimanjaro was a long one. In fact, it started five years ago, when Daanyal's father, Saeed Raja, climbed up Kilimanjaro on his own. He returned from the trip with pictures, stories and life lessons, all of which convinced Daanyal that someday, he wanted to join his father and climb the highest peak in Africa.

"I was in fifth grade at the time, and I was like, 'Dad, can I please come with you?

Freshman Daanyal Raja poses for a picture at the top of Mount Kilimanjaro. He made this climb with his family last December.

family) didn't according. They just worst constantly and you'd need to drink lots of

"Transitioning through high school"

获奖评价:

This story about a student's struggle to find his identity in high school is both unique and universal. The piece demonstrates the strongest combination of solid writing, depth of reporting and overall impact.

Beautifully done!

银奖: THOMAS BIRMINGHAM KIRKWOOD HIGH SCHOOL, KIRKWOOD, MISSOURI

"Where are they now: Allison Hudgins"

获奖评价:

Thomas' piece demonstrates his mature writing ability. He chose an interesting and newsworthy subject and tracked down solid supporting sources to deepen the profile. Very professionally done!

Where are they now: Allison Hudgins

Profession: founder of Five Star Academy - Location: Panama Class of 1991

Thomas Birmingham, in-depth editor

n old, white shipping container rests two hours west of Panama City, secluded in an area lush with trees and other plant life.

Once used during the construction of the Panama Canal, dents and chips are now splattered across the walls, and small windows let in as much of the glaring Panamanian sun as they can. Step inside the metal structure, however, and one will encounter fresh air conditioning, maps adorning the walls and books atop an array of grey folding tables. It is a place meant for learning. For inside this shipping

铜奖: HANNAH JANNOL SHALHEVET HIGH SCHOOL, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

"Three languages on the menu?"
Baruch Hashem!"

获奖评价:

Hannah's story captured her subjects vividly. I love that she chose under-heard voices to tell a vibrant story about cultures blending in a community. This piece demonstrated solid reporting and strong storytelling instincts.

Three languages on the menu? Baruch Hashem!

Spanish-speaking staff at local restaurants learned Hebrew before English, and are now learning Judaism, too

Hannah Jannol, Community Editor

March 31, 2017

t the popular kosher restaurants Nagila Pizza and La Gondola, ingredients aren't the only things mixing in the kitchen. Languages and cultures blend together like the steaming oregano, basil and tomatoes, with even some religion mixed into the sauce.

Armando Rodriguez immigrated to the United States from Durango, Mexico, in 1987, knowing only knew a few words and numbers in English. But after working in the Israeli restaurant Golan for three years, he was nearly fluent in both English and in Hebrew.

He worked there for another four years as a restaurant dishwasher, kitchen assistant and waiter before becoming a server at La Gondola on Wilshire Boulevard, where he has been now for 15 years.

BP Video by Talia Abel and Jordana Glouberman

健康、科学与农业写作

Health, Science, and Agricultural Writing

金奖: Natalie Katz Iowa City West High School, Iowa City, Iowa

"Got goats?"

获奖评价:

Natalie recognized a unique topic that involves education and agriculture her district hires teams of goats to eat invasive plants on school property and crafted a must-read story. The story opens with a descriptive lead graph, uses a variety of experts as sources, and includes a nice explanation of how the process works. It was a fun read and made me smile to visualize these goats munching away on school grounds.

keepers got multiple calls from the school's neighbors claiming the fence was down and the "IF IT MEANS oats were on the loose, only for them to show up and find everything in place. Despite hos these reports may have seemed like ways of get-ting rid of the goats, Grimm thinks they "weren't out of ill intent," but just showed that "they didn't know exactly what they were looking at" because of how uncomfortable people they are with

Eventually, the project's original skeptics we onvinced that it wasn't all negative. Integrated Post Management, a program in the district that tries to find alternative methods to avoid using pesticides, is one reason for this, "Itrus about the goats," according to Grimm.

umans are things the goats enjoy eating. For the school projects, they used the goats to eat

lown the vegetation so the workers can chain

"We could've gone in. We could've gotten a tractor. We could've buildozed. We could've

Not only are these versatile mammals bette or the environment, they also can be muc safer than a human going in these areas. Goat can access areas that people can't without risk t themselves because of their light feet and si

No many people are so detached from farm

"We're taking land that doesn't have any value and we're creating food from that land, [where it was poing to upset a lot of people," ICCSI

The first goats came in 2016 to repair revine and the effects of erosion and convert land into areas that people can use. That spring, the chools to receive them were Penn and Shimel Elementary Schools. In just three days, Penni once inaccessible land was ready to be converted

"They totally managed all the goats, so that safe," said Kristy Heffner, Principal of Penn El was people wondering if it would hurt the goat eat poison ivy and wild mustard. We learned from the owners that the goats are very able to andle this invasive sort of plant with no ill et

Roosevelt Education Center, Lincoln Elemen tary and City High were next on the list for the spring of 2017, chosen because of the severity of

now. There has been talk of them coming to

KEEPING TOXINS

AWAY FROM

THE STUDENTS

THAT'S A WIN

-BEN GRIMMS ICCSD GROUNDS

chewed it up with a brush mower, but we would have also been exposing our employees to ... plants that could put us in the hospital." Grim The goats are typically only at a location for shaped into paddocks, which divide the area into a grid. The goats are kept in a specific are intil everything is eaten, at which point one side of the paddock is opened for them to move to the mats either: "no matter if it's a large job or : small job, they are checked on daily," Steenhoe

AND KIDS...

SITUATION FOR

EVERYBODY."

Grimm recollected with a laugh.

The district is still very selective about which schools receive goats, due to both cost and graz-ing season. In Iowa, grazing season is only 150 days, starting in late May. When comparing th costs of goats to the other methods that would be used, they are surprisingly similar, especially when working with steep hills. Even if the land i flat, the benefits far outweigh the negatives. "If it means that we're keeping toxins awa said. This is done to make sure the costs an healthy, and that the customer is getting wha

With job sizes ranging from around 40 to 250 side of the spectrum at between 20-30 goats at be overwhelming for young children at the el-ementary schools, especially when mixed with a unning circuit of electricity. To protect the chi put up outside of the electric fence. In addition lren, a seven to eight foot tall perimeter fence is tame goat is brought from site to site for the

"It was weird because the [tame] goat would just follow you around like a dog. If it couldn't find you, it'd start jamping up and down try ing to look over the weeds trying to find you from the students and kids ... that's a win situa tion for everybody," Grimm said.

Two years after this project first took shap to dangerous chemicals, which can lead to ma serious diseases and defects.

ICCSD has had the initiative in taking steps t ing the city and University of Iowa to follow in able. If you could do it at an elementary school

银奖: Charlie Holden McCallum High School, Austin, Texas

"Don't drive me nuts"

获奖评价:

Charlie's personal narrative of the dangers of food allergies was honest and raw. And Charlie's suggestions for how the rest of us can help those with food allergies is a great call to action for the reader.

eshield

Don't drive me nuts

Living with food allergies can be terrifying, especially when they aren't taken seriously

CHARLIE HOLDEN

staff reporter

"But, it's not like you're going to die, right?" The barista stared at me suspiciously, picking out a mug for the latte I had just ordered She looked over her shoulder to where her coworker had gone into the kitchen to ask if the pumpkin bread was made with nuts. I ground the heel of my shoe against the floor. "Yeah. I could die."

She didn't respond. After several minutes of tense silence, her co-worker returned.

"The kitchen says they're pretty sure there aren't any almonds. But it's not like you're going to die, right?"

In the early hours of New Year's Day, only two weeks before my 13th birthday, I lay in a hospital bed thinking, "Yeah. I could die." This summer, throwing up into a swampy porta-potty I thought, "Yeah, I could die." One month ago I leaned against the doorframe to my bedroom, feeling my heart freeze up in my chest. Yeah. I could die

At 7 years old I was told by my allergist not to worry, that my allergies would fade with time, that once I was older I would be able to eat almonds by the fistful. My body, however, had other ideas. When I was 11, I ate an almond chocolate and had my first experience with anaphylaxis, and this year I discovered that I had developed an allergy to tuna, a food which I have loved since I was a toddler.

Now that I'm 17 years old, I have episodes of anaphylaxis every time I accidentally eat tuna or almonds (including almond oil, flour, extract, butter or milk). My symptoms vary depending on the amount of food that I eat. but nausea, vomiting, tongue, cheek and throat swelling, mental confusion, nasal congestion, hives and low blood pressure are typical. When this happens, I have to stick myself in the thigh with an EpiPen, which is a springloaded shot of epinephrine. These shots can have side effects including dizziness, rapid heart rate, weakness and anxiety.

Avoiding tuna has been easy enough, but almonds are far harder to detect, possibly hiding in any food you can imagine, from green beans (the summer of 2013) to a peanut but-

GREEN

So every time a waiter or cashier gives me a not-so-thinly-veiled look of annoyance when I ask them to check ingredients, it's hard to not grind my teeth in anger. What is annoying to them is potentially lethal to me.

Living with serious food allergies doesn't have to be hard-all I really need to do is remember to check ingredients and have enough self control to reject food that I don't know the origin of (which can be difficult, I mean, who wants to turn down nice, homemade baked goods?) My job, however, is made harder when people around me don't know how to handle my allergies. To be fair, when I was younger I kept the secret of my allergies close to me, afraid to be seen as an inconvenience to restaurant servers, teachers or the parents of my friends. Now, after multiple reactions that could have been easily avoided, I no longer

Here are some things you can do to help lergy, ask them specifically what you can and people with food allergies avoid reactions as well as give them some piece of mind. Label food. If you're having a party or a gathering and you bring food which does not come with an ingredient list, just put little notes on the containers, like "This has nuts." or "Dairy-free" I have had more reactions at parties and at social gatherings than any-

Don't offer a friend with food allergies something unless you're sure it's safe. Several times I've taken food that was offered to me so as not to seem rude only to discover the food had almonds in it

Ask them questions. Some people only have reactions if they ingest their allergens (like me), but other people can have reactions from something as simple as sitting next to mind if I'm seen as a bother because I know their allergen. If you know a friend has an al-

Illustration by Charlie Holde. cannot eat around them.

Be accommodating. For example, some res taurants cook most of their food in peanut oil, so people with peanut allergies just can't go there. It can be embarrassing to tell someone. especially someone you don't know that well. that they have to change their plans because you have an allergy. Stay positive, you don't want your friends to feel like they're a burden. Don't lecture them-too much. After I've had a reaction is probably the worst time to tell me how I wasn't being careful enough. Trust me, it's a lesson that's been learned the hard way. But if your friend truly is being care less about checking for their allergens, it's OK to tell them, "Hey, I don't want you to die." Trust that someone's allergy is as serious as they tell you. I don't want to hear, "It's not like you're going to die, right?"

03 March 2017 opinion 29

铜奖: Adele Lee (with Ryan Johnson) Adlai E. Stevenson High School, Lincolnshire, Illinois

"Closing the gap"

获奖评价:

A well-constructed story that identifies a problem—gender imbalance in STEM—and details potential solutions implemented at their school.

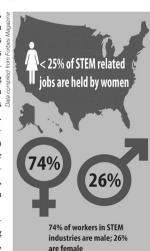

CLOSING THE GAP

Students, faculty reflect on gender imbalance in STEM education, promote equality at Stevenson

t around 6 p.m. Wednesday, Room 1428 is bustling with activity. Within it, wires pop, inventors tinker and voices intermingle, indicative of VEX Robotics Club members collaborating as they tailor their robot to a given challenge. Among these members are seven females out of a total of 35.

The gender gap in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) fields is nothing out of the ordinary. According to the U.S. Department of Commerce, currently, less than 25% of females in America hold jobs in STEM.

Stevenson's math team also carries its own gender gap. According to sponsor Christian Thibaudeau, ing effects of sexism throughout history. The preconceived notion that women are inferior to men, or better fit for domestic roles, has influenced subsequent generations.

"Looking back in history, men have always been the breadwinners whereas women stayed home and did the housework," Bhatnagar said. "Now that isn't the case in 2018, but a similar idea still applies. It is very common to see men in the higher positions or getting the higher paid jobs over the women who are equally qualified."

Likewise, Chen finds that these stereotypes are often introduced at an early age, resulting in a disconnect between young girls and

Category 9: 博客写作 Blogging

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖:

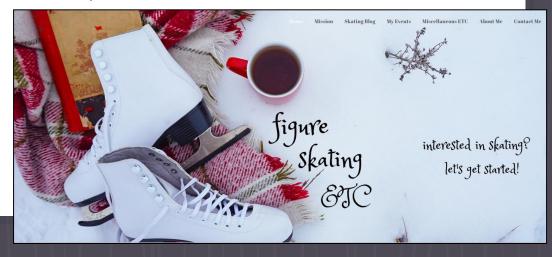

Emily Chang

The Ranney School, Tinton Falls, New Jersey

"Figure Skating ETC"

获奖评价:

I was thoroughly impressed by Ms. Chang's presentation, attention to detail, and commitment to teaching about a passion achieves its mission: "I want to share my knowledge and experiences and educate others so they are well-informed and prepared, but most importantly, so they can enjoy skating to its fullest potential and have a positive and fun experience."

银奖:

Samalya Thenuwara

Iowa City West High School, Iowa City, Iowa

English Aid to Rural Sri Lanka

获奖评价:

This blog is chock full of information about this young woman's project, including quarterly reports, which are easily accessible and professional. Plenty of multimedia to boot.

铜奖:

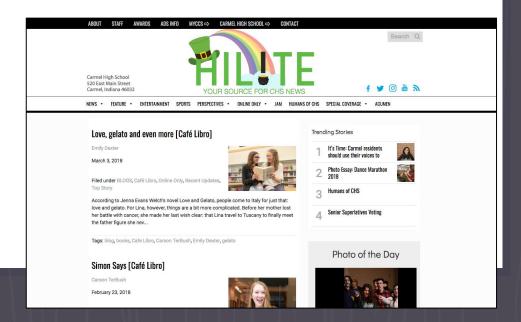

Emily Dexter

Carmel High School, Carmel, Indiana

Cafe Libro

获奖评价:

One of the more fun entries that really commits to keeping the reader interested. Frequently updated and multimedia presentation is solid.

摄影类和多媒体类 Photo and Multimedia Categories

- 专题新闻摄影 News Feature Photography
- 体育新闻摄影 Sports Photography
- 新闻插图 Photo Illustration
- 幻灯片制作 Photo Slideshow
- 多媒体故事(专题)Multimedia Storytelling Features

Category 10: 专题新闻摄影

News Feature Photography

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Julie Arehart

Oregon City High School, Oregon City, Oregon

"Yellow Truck"

获奖评价:

Fun photo that captures a great moment. Good layering that draws the viewer through the image. A feature photo that celebrates an unexpected moment in life. Love the body language of everyone reacting to the broken-down truck. Good uses of color with the yellow truck anchoring the frame.

银奖: Lauren David

Arapahoe High School, Centennial, Colorado

"Girl in Bathroom"

获奖评价:

The posed portrait of a young protester, in a bathroom, captures the viewer right away. The black and white toning helps add to the power of the portrait with her dark hair framing her face... drawing you right away to her eyes. The clean background helps bring forward the subject.

铜奖: Emily Blunt

Richland R-1 Schools, Essex, Missouri

"Graduation's First Tear"

获奖评价:

The photo of the tear-filled senior during graduation was a beautiful moment. The image brings you right away into the emotion that the young women is feeling. The crop of the photo was a bit awkward and the frame would be elevated with a slight crop from the bottom to clean up the frame and the composition.

Category 11:

体育新闻摄影

Sports Photography

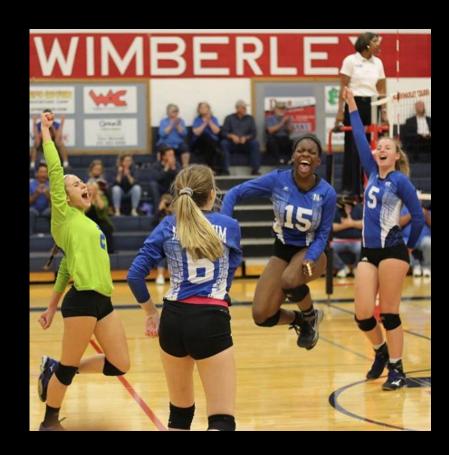

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Madison Olsen McCallum High School, Austin, Texas

"Point Taken"

获奖评价:

Great emotion. This photo captures the moment perfectly. Volleyball players are so expressive after every point. That makes the sport so fun to photograph. This point seems even more consequential than normal ones because of the emotions on the players' faces. Congratulations to the photographer for not just sticking with the action of the individual plays, but watching what happens afterward. It reminds me of one of my favorite images of a soccer team's celebration of a goal that secured their place in a playoff tournament. Keep up the good work.

银奖: Julia Arehart Oregon City High School, Oregon City, Oregon

"Wrestler Celebrates"

获奖评价:

Very visually appealing photo. I like a lot about this photo. The lighting is phenomenal as the photographer worked really hard to find the clean background paired with the emotion as this wrestler celebrated his victory. I wish we had more room to show all the fingers on the top. It might not have been possible for the photographer in this case, but I could see how this photo could be even better if the vanquished opponent was pictured crumpled on the ground below the winner - like in the iconic Muhammad Ali vs. Sonny Liston photo. Great instincts by the photographer to be patient, capturing more emotion even after the bout had ended.

铜奖: Richard Giang Lakota East High School, Liberty Township, Ohio

"Setting The Pace"

获奖评价:

Track is not the easiest sport to cover for a lot of reasons but this photograph works because it is clean and simple. This photo is not only technically sound but easily draws the viewer directly into the picture. I used to be a track athlete so I can relate to how difficult it is to capture the sport with a new, creative angle. I like how the photographer focused on the verse painted on the runner's cheek which starts to tell an inspirational story that goes beyond a normal action shot. It says something about the athlete and the team.

Category 12: 新闻插图 Photo Illustration

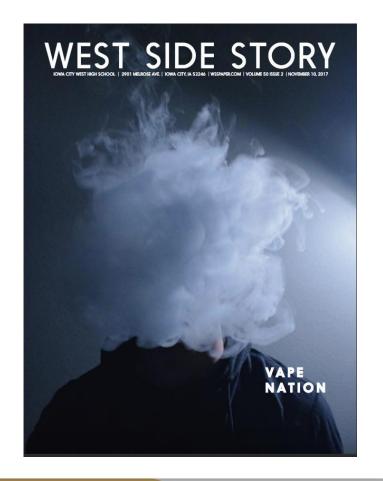

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Alyson Kuennen lowa City West High, Iowa City, Iowa

"Vape Nation"

获奖评价:

This illustration stood out from the rest of the entries for its high quality, excellent use of light and color tone. Without showing an actual vaporizer, this illustration clearly expresses the subject and draws the reader in.

银奖: Andrew Maresca Johnston High School, Johnston, Iowa

"Reliving a Rollover Accident"

获奖评价:

This photo shows a creative approach to a difficult subject with great thought and execution, capturing the mental and emotional response to an accident in a non-literal way.

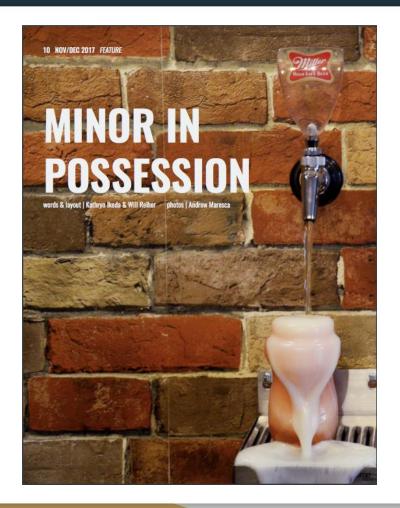

铜奖: Kathryn Ikeda Johnston High School, Johnston, Iowa

"Minor in Possession"

获奖评价:

This was a humorous approach to a serious story that very quickly conveyed the topic.

Category 13: 幻灯片制作

Photo Slideshow

•••

金奖: Veronica Murphy Manila High School, Manila, Arkansas

"Miss Manila Pageant"

获奖评价:

Great variety. For any pageant or arts/entertainment event, it's important to get behind-the-scenes moments to show the work and preparation that goes into them. I would have liked Veronica to take a step back to get some wide shots that help set the scene, but overall I thought she did a great job covering the event and getting a nice variety of photos.

银奖: Justin Lentinen Blue Valley Northwest High School, Overland Park, Kansas

"BVNW Wins Instant Classic"

获奖评价:

Peak action and emotion were fantastic. This is how a game should be shot. The variety of fans, action and different angles kept me in the moment.

铜奖: Zoe Miller Iowa City High School, Iowa City, Iowa

"Women's March 2018"

获奖评价:

It's great that you talked to every person in your photos. The quotes add depth and show strong reporting. It gave them voices and a chance to tell us why they were protesting, which helps tell the overall story. Your gallery could use a few more photos from the actual protest and march.

金奖: Jeeweon moon

Korea international school, jeju campus, south korea

"Haenyeo Anti-Colonization Movement"

获奖评价:

This is a superb documentary that explores a topic of historical importance with poise, vigor and a driving sense of purpose. The unfolding narrative is thoroughly researched and engagingly written while being displayed on screen through a masterful mix of visuals and voices. The depth of knowledge this documentary possesses demonstrates tenacity and a drive to produce a solid piece of reporting told through a most engaging lens by taking advantage of the multimedia tools available. Click on image to play.

银奖: ethan goers & nick pryor lowa city west high, iowa city, iowa

"A Discussion: Gun Ownership in Iowa"

获奖评价:

This story explores a timely, relevant issue in a reasoned way that relies on facts, research and an inquisitive spirit. The reporters seek a multitude of voices that help readers better understand gun laws in their state, no matter their personal feelings on the matter. This story represents a "best-practices" approach of how more student publications should tackle important and controversial issues. Click on image to play.

铜奖: annie o'brien Kirkwood high school, kirkwood, missouri

"Suicide Awareness Week Video 2017"

获奖评价:

The piece uses video and audio techniques to tell a compelling, riveting story rife with detail and emotion about a topic of utmost importance for students. The firsthand accounts combined with a masterful approach and command of the tools available leave the viewer with a deep sense of connection to the subjects and their stories. Click on image to play.

设计类 Design Categories

- 社论漫画 Editorial Cartoon
- 广告 Advertisement
- 封面/首页设计 Cover/Front Page Design
- 专题新闻页设计 Feature Page Design
- 体育新闻页设计 Sports Page Design

Category 15:

社论漫画

Editorial Cartoon

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Edmund Lewellen Fishers High School, Fishers, Indiana

"Fishing for Compliments"

获奖评价:

A strong commentary on social media and how humans are using various platforms to "fish" for compliments. This is a sophisticated rendering that takes only a moment to make both a strong cultural and political statement, as well as a strong artistic statement.

银奖: Elijah Jackson Lawrence High School, Lawrence, Kansas

"Protest: Trans students at LHS"

获奖评价:

Simple statement, but very strong. Immediately understandable. The colors help us recognize the diversity of the persons, and the signs help convey the plea of those holding them and their cause. Difficult to see the word "cis" in the middle sign, so the reader has to work just a little to get the full impact.

铜奖: Lina Wang irvine High School, Irvine, California

"Social Media Platforms"

获奖评价:

Elegant metaphor that appropriates the twitter logo and conveys it on other social media "birdies." The simple hand stretches to put a metaphorical cage on the output of the birds, limiting their freedom. The impact is immediate, and the message is crystal clear about whether social media platforms have an obligation to shut down hate speech.

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Jadon Herrman Francis Howell North High School, St. Charles, Missouri

"Sparks Tire and Auto"

获奖评价:

You know right away what this ad is about (image of brakes and rotor) and why you should read more (Save $50 at the top). The ad incorporates NAPA colors and the text pulls your eyes down to the rest of the ad. Well played and put together well with no confusion.

银奖: Allison Brannan

Southside High School, Fort Smith, Arkansas

"December Page 3 Ad Designs"

获奖评价:

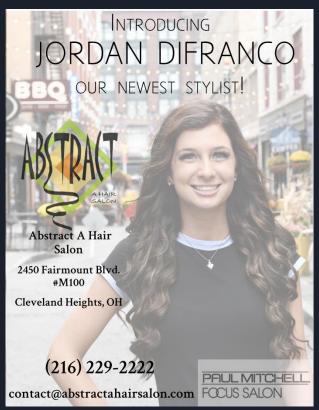

Bold and well done branding ad. Makes you want to try some. The top half of the ad is a bit fuzzy. Easy fix by re-setting the type, which is a great habit when printing reverse.

铜奖: Bryce Hasman Brecksville-Broadview Heights High School, Broadview Heights, Ohio

"Introducing Jordan DiFranco"

获奖评价:

Attractive ad, good placement of logos and text into photo. The background of the photo is busy, so a thicker font would help the title pop out.

Category 17:

封面/首页设计

Cover/Front Page Design

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Grace Chisholm Shawnee Mission East High School, Prairie Village, Kansas

"This is Meg"

获奖评价:

This is a fantastic concept.
Grace could have chosen to put one element in Braille, but this really makes an impact. Color choices are neutral, which fit the topic well. The design is clean and eye-catching. Great work.

银奖: Andrew Maresca Johnston High School, Johnston, Iowa

"Once a Dragon"

获奖评价:

The colors and creativity really make this cover pop. The design is busy, but not to the point that it takes away from any of the elements. It is clean and creative, and the designer did a great job of melding the photo and graphics.

铜奖: Julia Nall Bryant High School, Bryant, Arkansas

"Prospective February Cover"

获奖评价:

Fun retro vibes and strong use of color! Lines are well represented and tie the visuals together. Teaser formatting could be done more creatively to better utilize space, but overall the concept is visually pleasing and clear.

Category 18:

专题新闻页设计

Feature Page Design

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

金奖: Chloe Reid

Mountain View High School, Stafford, Virginia

"Dash of Cranberry"

获奖评价:

This spread is great. It's simple and nicely organized. The chalk headlines are a great way to meld the photos and text. There is plenty of open space for the readers to explore. The concept is unique and unlike any other entry.

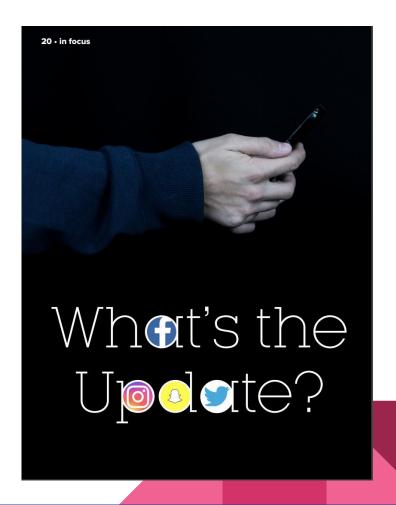

银奖: Rachel Hunt Horizon High School, Scottsdale, Arizona

"What's the Update?"

获奖评价:

The photo chosen on this design is excellent, and the type is clean. The icons add color and a connection to readers without overpowering the design.

铜奖: Hailey Port, Bartel Van Oostendorp

West Henderson High School, Hendersonville, North Carolina

"Monumental Decisions"

获奖评价:

The headline treatment works well for this design. Designers often take this too far, but this is perfect. The headline and deck align well with the photo, and the designer used white space to make a statement as well.

2018 美国国际高中生传媒大赛

Category 19:

体育新闻页设计

Sports Page Design

金奖:

Chase Bennett

Malvern Preparatory School, Malvern, Pennsylvania

"The return of O'Shaan Allison"

获奖评价:

Chase created a page that's fun to look at, but still easy to read. The colors don't overpower the photo or the text. The accent font is just that, and not used too much. There's a great balance of visuals and text on this page.

银奖:

Meg Schwartz and Lanie Jones

Notre Dame de Sion, Kansas City, Missouri

"Sports in Brief"

获奖评价:

This page is organized well. The consistency of the images and briefs at the top pair nicely with the story and schedule at the bottom. Lanie and Meg chose appropriate places to use color, and just enough of it.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Swall Park

ORE TO LEAR

The storm was defeated in a tough sorthall game against S. Teresa's Academy on Aug. 29. Though the score was 80, senior Katilin Dervin said the varsity team plans to learn from their mistakes on the field and use this loss as a steeping stone for the rest of the season to being home their skills. Teven though we make mistakes on the field, I think the team needs to work on batting. 'Dervin said. (Prototo y Pajes Ritter)

FUNDRAISING FORE

A golf tournament will be hold to findnation for high school athletics at Hill Crest Golf and Country Chib on Fidaly Sept. 29. Registration is at 11 am. and fee time is at noon. Auryone is allowed to participate in the tournament that was put together by Assistant Director of Athletics and Community Willense Sarah and Community Willense Sarah johnson. The goal is to raise funds for our high school sports and create a fun community setting. Tournament with the community setting.

WORLD CHAMPION

Freshman Nicole Jackson won not just one, but two World Championship in The World Championship Horse Show in Louisville, Kentucký Ang. 18-25. Both of the championships were swarded in roadster pony driving. Both were also unanimous wins. 'I worked hard for it,' Jackson said, 'but was shocked, 'Proteot by Poige Riber! Jawas Shocked, 'Proteot by Poige Riber!

FOUR YEAR FIGH

Varity senior played their final St. Tereals Anademy match on Sept 11.3. The Storm took the Stars to three sets but STA edged out the svin. Senior and outside hiter Ellic Chaffee made the most out of the experience and obleved the students section gave the whole team confidence. If was really obtained to the supplement of the students section gave the whole team confidence. If was really said that it was the last time playing against our rivals so it means a dot to me and all the other seniors, Chaffee and, O'Hook by a Chartenier ferstern

STORM SCHEDULE

SEPT 29

VARSITY SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT RAYTOWN SOUTH

*OCT 05

VARSITY VOLLEYBALL VS BARSTOW BARSTOW HIGH SCHOOL

*OCT 07

VARISTY FIELD HOCKEY VS VISITATION ACADAMEY HOME GAME

*OCT 12

CROSS COUNTRY MEET WARRENSBURG HIGH

E Propeck Breaks Through the Storm

During tryouts freshman Megan Propeck breaks an all time school record and learns what it means to be part of the Sion golf community.

BY GRACIE ROBERTS REPORTER

For most student abblicts, sports tryouts can be both nerve-racking and intimidating. For freshman Megan Propect, they were the beginning of a great lifetime achievement. Breaking the record for the all time loss score in Sing pdi team bistury. Propeck was both surprised and excited. Never did she think that it would happen, especially during the second day of tryouts at Minor Park. But she has always had a low for the sport and strives to pair better everythen.

Propeck began playing gold young Free or six years old at the Blue Hills Country Club. Her father introduced the game to both her and her brother and they both developed a love for the sport. Her thriving passion for golf is credited to her older brother, Jake Propeck, who is a senior at Rockhurst High School.

"She's a really hard worker, and has always been willing to do whatever it takes to win. We push each other to be the best that we can be," Jake said.

other to be the best that we can be, Jake said.

After years of playing, Propeck finally got to share her talent with the high school team.

She had talked to many golf coaches from all different high schools from many different areas but none stood out like Sion. She loved the golf program, Coach Dana Hoeper's encouragement and the school's environment. Propeck said she loves being on the varsity team and getting to know and play with the gift.

"It's great getting to be on the Sion golf team and play varsity. I love playing as a team and competing with them. It's nice to have someone cheering you on," Propeck said.

With her extensive knowledge of golf from playing for many years, Propeck helps strategize with the other players and gets to help all the girls who have never played before.

"To us she's a team member, and she brings a lot of knowledge to the game but also a lot of laughter to the course as well," senior Paige Shankland said.

Propeck has learned much from the golf team as well. She is so used to playing in competitive summer individual tournaments that it was an adjustment learning how to play with and for the team as a

> "I don't know everything about golf by any means and it's great to learn from some of the girls on how to play high school golf and about different teams," Propeck said.

Propeck never would have imagined that she would break a school record but by achieving this lifetime dream, she has gone above and beyond.

"I've always wanted to do something in a way to leave a mark at Sion in the golf program and it was really cool that I could do it this way," Propeck said.

20 LE JOURNAL

铜奖:

Annabelle Cook

Shawnee Mission East High School, Prairie Village, Kansas

"Sting Like a Bee"

获奖评价:

This is a fun concept. The photo choices are good and it's nice to see the cartoon concept pull the two pages together. The color is just right and the pull-out quote fits nicely to break up the text.

